Dr. Jackola Believed To Have Been Suicide

DULUTH Minn., Oct. 16.-A verdict of suicide probably will be given by the coroner's jury, which convenes late today to consider how Dr. John Jockola, physician, equal suffragist, and former physician, equal suffragist, and former admirer of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, met his death. A decomposed body identified as that of the doctor was found in the woods east of here yesterday. He had been missing since June 21.

Jackola returned to Duluth in the spring after being arrested in New York on complaint of Mrs. Belmont, the suffrage leader, who alleged that Jackola's attempts at love-making were offensive. The physician, himself a lecfensive. The physician, himself a lecturer on woman's suffrage, promised to discontinue his attentions and to return to Duluth, where he had a large practice.

Choates Celebrating Their Golden Wedding

LENOX, Mass., Oct. 16.-Joseph H. Choate, former ambassador to Great Pritain, and Mrs. Choate today celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at Naumkeag, their country place in the Berkshires, surrounded by a large party of relatives and friends from New York of relatives and friends from New York and other cities.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Choate took place October 16, 1961, a few years after Mr. Choate had begun the practice of law in New York. Mrs. Choate, be-fore her marriage, was Miss Caroline Butcher Stirling, a daughter of Fred-erick A. Stirling, of Cleveland.

Major Judson Back From Trip to Toledo

Engineer Commissioner Judson returned today from a visit of inspection of the municipal garbage reduction plant at Toledo. He will submit a report of his observations, which the Commissioners, in turn will send to Congress. The Commissioners hope to have a municipal plant in operation by the present contract expires.

Opposition to Tobacco Plan Causes Decline

STOCKS WERE DECIDEDLY EASIER LOCAL SECURITIES UNDER BEARISH PRESSURE. LIGHT TRADING

NEW YORK. Oct. 16.—Sentiment turned the other way. In looking for a reason therefore one cannot but be impressed with the determination of the independent tobacco companies to fight the reorganization of the American Tocacco Company. No plans, other than a liquidation and retirement from business, would find favor with the little toads, too long kept down by the masters, new given a chance in the puddle and anxious to boss the whole shooting match.

Should the independents in all other lines follow suit, and there is no reason to opine that they would be less aggressive in their attempts to play even, the trust proposition has developed a new trust proposition has developed a new angle, and one that must be taken in hand by the courts with thoughtful consideration and wisdom. And the claims of the independents, who are such because there has been no obportunity to be otherwise, judged from the experience of the past, should be sifted to the dregs. If there has got to be destruction of endeavor, there must be reconstruction, unhampered by technicalities.

to the noon hour with a weak appearance.

From noon on until midway in the second hour of the afternoon it was a slow, dragging market. The bears had been successful in turning the tide from strength to weakness, but they did not seem inclined to force the issue. The financial interests are giving a little encouragement in view of the fact that this is wisdom where there are so many conditions that might lead to trouble.

There was no recovery from the noon levels other than a small fraction here and there, and the indications were for a continuation of the slowness throughout the remaining part of the session.

Faker Plays "Chester." Author, Duping City

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 16.-The city of Stoughton, near here, has just had its "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" in the person of Orrin Kellogg, of Fairfield, Iowa., who represented himself as George Randolph Chester, the wellknown author. He was received with open arms and lionized by the residents of Stoughton, a special reception being given in his honor, while a banquet was given by Prof. G. D. Banting, principal of the High School, who had "Chester" for his guest.

After several days of gayety, a Watertown, S. D., bank reported that "Chester" had no funds, and his check in payment of his hotel bill was At the same time a newspaper carried the report that the real Chester was being sued for divorce by his wife in the East, and the city realized that it had been duped. Relatives will settle Kellogg's bills.

School Bank Deposits Near the $1,000 Mark

Deposits at the Washington, D. C., High School Bank opened last week at Business High School, today approached within a few dollars of the $1,000 mark. It is expected that by the end of this week the bank will have $2,000 in its coffers.

A present of $35 was received this morning from the two-year class of 1911 toward the purchase of a safe. At present a "runner" carries the daily deposits to a down-town bank. When the safe is installed a small amount to pay out on drafts will be kept on hand all the time.

Arrangements are being made to have the time.

From the Botanic Garden he was taken over the residential district of the northwest section then to the was taken over the residential district of the northwest section, then to the Catholic University of America, in Brookland, where he met his old friend, Father A. P. Doyle of the Apostolic mission house.

When asked by newspaper men if he could excel President Taft in his native game of golf, Mr. Lauder replied that he could give the President a game ne would remember. Concerning the famed tennis game between the former President Roosevelt and the Bishop of London, Mr. Lauder said that in all probability the bishop bad won the match, since the result of the game never was given out.

Uncle Sam Is Not Meddling in China

State Department officials today denounced as "unfounded and mischieyous" the reborts from Europe that Russia and the United States were taking steps to interfere in the affairs of China and assist the Peking government to suppress the present rebellion.

It was stated emphatically that this Government is preserving the strictest neutrality regarding the Chinese revolution, and will continue such a policy indefinitely. The only activities permitted the consular representatives of the State the consular representatives of the State Department at Hankow and other cities in the disturbed region are those direct-ed toward assuring the safety of Ameri-can residents.

Contempt Proceedings Continued by Court

Juffice Gould, in the District Supreme Court, today continued the contempt proceedings against Walter Stilson Hutchins and John P. Heap, president and secretary, respectively, of the Humane Society, charged with intimidation of Raymond J. Cooley, an agent of the society and a juror, till Friday. Both men already have filed emphatic denials of the charge with the court.

'Fake" Beggars Arrested. CHICAGO, Oct. 16.-Because Chief of Police McWeeney says—there are so many "fake deaf and dumb" beggars he has ordered that mendicants of this variety be arrested on sight. THE TIMES DAILY SERIAL STORY

THE SCARLET SCARAB

By Albert Payson Terhune, Author of "In the Lion's Mouth," and "Blundell's Last (Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Co.)

? HY should it?" "Don't the New York girls you know look down "I don't know. You see, I never met any New York girls." "Oh! I thought you were a New Yorker." "I am." "And you never met any New York girls? Are you a woman-hater?" "Not at all. I've simply been two busy. Of course, I had a nodding acquaintance with the stenographers at the factory and with my landlady's daughter, but I never had time to talk with any of them." She was sitting very straight and looking keenly at me, as if to determine whether or not I was jesting.

"Why, you said—"

I saw suspicion leap into her big eyes, but I went on:

"I've fallen in love successively with Juliet, Portia, Desdemona, Di Vernon, the Lady of the Lake—"

"Oh!" she laughed, the suspicion fading. "So you took all your sweethearts from the books?"

"Where else was I to find them? The best thing about falling in love with a book heroine is that she can never break your heart by rejecting you. And, if she marries another man, one has the satisfaction of knowing the lucky chap never really existed except in some writer's brain."

"Do you know," she interposed. "what you tell me makes me very much ashamed of my carlier ideas about you? You were so stiff—almost uncivil—whenever I tried to talk to you at the table. I put it down to sulkiness; while really it was only because you weren't used to talking to girls."

Remembering my real reason for avoiding her, I felt a twinge of conscience at her naive speech. But it also brought me back to my senses and warned me that I was in dire danger of forgetting that Amos Todd's daughter was probably not the sort of woman in whom a sensible man ought to allow himself to get too deeply interested.

I drew back into my shell; but any awkwardness incident on my awakened precautions was averted by the stopping of the carriage in front of an exceptionally dingy shop.

"This is the place!" said Miss Todd, consulting a paper in her hand and comparing it with a half effaced name above the shop door. "Tris is the place Count Sebaste told me contained more antiques than any other in Naples. He says lots of better classes deal here in spite of the shabby locality. It seems that Dardo, the man who keeps it, is an artist in his own lipe of repairing or furbishing up jewelry."

I stood aside to let her pass before me into the darksome, musty, little semblance of order, and all gray with dust

I stood confused, bewildered, fearing to move lest I smash something or overturn a tableful of trinkets.

Put Miss Todd had no such fear. Womanlike, she flitted here and there, nicking up one thing, stooping to inspect another, turning a third to the light for closer view; upsetting nothing, though seemingly taking no heeling, though seemingly taking no heel of where she went; giving little gurgles of ecstasy at sight of some particularly atroclous bit of marble that looked to me like a cutrage tombstone, and turning away without a second glance from brighter, graver-looking pieces of jewelry that seemed to my inexperienced eves the only attractive things in the place.

As I waited, stupidly watching her and marveling at her safe progress among all the fottering masses of me.

As I waited, stupidly watching her and marveling at her safe progress among all the tottering masses of me-dievalism, an old man hobbled in from and marveling at her safe progress among all the fottering masses of medievalism, an old man hobbled in from a reur door.

He looked dingier and more dilapidated than anything else in the shop. He eyed us sourly as Miss Todd turned on him.

"Are you Signor Dardo?" she asked, in rather bad Italian.

"Eh?" he grunted, turning his head aideways, after the inimitable manner of the half-deaf.

She repeated the query in a slightly slightly sents?

She repeated the query in a slightly of the half-deaf.

She repeated the query in a slightly higher pitch.

"No." he muttered, in the vilest of Nearolitanese; "no; Signor Dardo is out. I am keeping shop for him. What do you want?"

Hu actually seemed to resent our presence there, and looked suggestively at the still open door. Decidedly, Dardo was not likely to make much money if carved.

Sixty cents?

"No. I'm not!" he snapped, slamming shot the book. "Three lire is the price.

There was a mistake somewhere. Any carved.

I was not likely to be a loser.

I handed him a five-lire note and be trusted this sort of substitute to boom the wares during his absence.

But Miss Todd had no idea of taking the old fellow's hint. She continued her inspection of the shop, the Neapolitan hobbing along in her wake with many a grumbling remonstrance. Unlike the shoppers I have read of in the comic papers, she was not content with handling and pricing. She also bought.

How she did buy! Lengths of yellow old laces, bits of grimy carving, dented metal clasps with queer tracery and fretwork, tattered tapestry, and all manner of similar things that no normal man would give house-room.

And never once bargaining, or disputing the incredible prices the old shopkeeper chose to charge.

"Well." I said to myself, as I stood did in the dusty corner whither I had backed for safety, "if Amos Todd earned his money by rebbing his fellow men, there ought to be a sort of poetic justice in the way he's being robbed of a goodly portion of that money just at this minute."

Once or twice I feebly tried to intervene and to suggest to the reckless mine whether or not I was jesting.

"Do you actually mean to say," she began, at last, "that you've never had any girl acquaintances in all your life?"

"Never till I met you. I suppose we are acquaintances, aren't we? I've talked more with you than I ever did with any other girl."

"I really believe you're telling the truth," she murmured, with a sort of incredulous awe. "And to think of a man living to your age without ever even having had the misfortune to fall in love!"

"But I didn't say I hadn't fallen in love!" I protested. "I have—often."

"Why, you said—"

"Why, you said—"
I saw suspicion leap into her big eyes, but I went on:
